

GAUTAM NARULA

"I'D LIKE TO ADDRESS THE M... I'D LIKE TO LET YOU KNOW
THAT, DESPITE THE SITUATION... ALL OF YOU ARE CONVINCED
I'M THE PERSON WHO KILLED... YOUR SON... YOUR BROTHER... BUT I AM INNOCENT... THE TRUTH IS THAT
THAT NIGHT WAS NOT MY... THAT NIGHT, I DID NOT SHOOT YOUR... FOR YOUR LOSS, I
REALLY AM... I DON'T KNOW DEEPER
INTO THIS CASE... THE TRUTH I ASK
MY FAMILY AND... TO CONTINUE TO FORGIVE, CONT... WHO ARE ABOUT TO TAKE MY LIFE, MAY... YOUR SOULS AND
GOD BLESS YOU ALL... A MEMOIR

REMAIN
FREE

The Center for African and African Diaspora Studies and the India China
America Institute
at Kennesaw State University

Present:

Beyond A Reasonable Doubt: Troy Davis and Capital Punishment in Georgia

A Talk by Gautam Narula,
Author of "Remain Free"

April 26, 2016, 5pm - 6:30pm

Kennesaw State University
Social Science Bldg #3029

Event is FREE and open to the public.

When Georgia death row inmate Troy Davis was executed in 2011, despite serious doubts about his guilt, he was the most well-known death row inmate in the world. Drawing upon his close friendship with Davis and years working on the case, Gautam Narula shows how the Troy Davis case exemplified the common issues with the death penalty in Georgia: racial and income bias, arbitrary application, and an inflexible legal and political system that may allow innocent people to be executed.

Learn more: www.remainfree.com.

